Local Business and Community Support Brings Women's Economic Power Day to Boston; Mayor Thomas Menino Proclaims April 8, 2006 as Women's Economic Power Day

BOSTON – March 27, 2006, With the support of local business and community organizations, Boston will host Women's Economic Power Day – the second city on the eight city 2006 National Economic Power Tour. Boston Mayor Thomas Menino will proclaim April 8, 2006 as Women's Economic Power Day in the City of Boston.

Women's Economic Power Day is a day long power summit – filled with skillshops, information sessions, and opportunities to access local resources and economic power experts. The event will be held in Boston on April 8, 2006 (from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.) at The Harvard Club, One Federal Street, 38th Floor. Leading local business and community organizations supporting Women's Economic Power Day in Boston include the following: Boston Chamber of Commerce, State Office of Minority and Women's Business Assistance, Center for Women's Leadership – Babson College, Boston's Women's Network, E-Women Network, Beatnik Bags, and Downtown Women's Club.

Boston is the second of eight cities hosting Women's Economic Power Day on the 2006 National Economic Power tour. Other cities hosting the 2006 Tour include Chicago, Minneapolis, Seattle, New York, Detroit, San Francisco, and Denver.
